

Student Sal loves many restaurants at the Russell House University Union, but with the threat of COVID-19, he has been told not to wait in long lines for food as he will have an increased risk of contracting the virus.

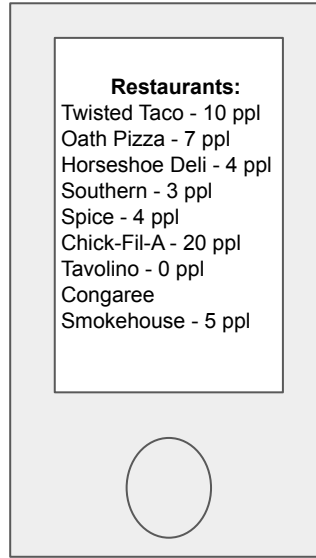

Sal's friend Ryan hears about his problem and thought of a simple solution. He downloads an app to best map out a safe traffic flow at the Russell House University Union and find restaurants with short lines.

Ryan tells Sal about the app and shows him how to find restaurants with shorter lines

Sal thanks Ryan and asks him to walk over to the Russell House for dinner with him.

Sal and Ryan originally planned to eat at Twisted Taco, but upon entering the University Union, they open the app and find that Twisted Taco has the longest line.

Sal and Ryan revise their plan to eat at Tavolino, which has the shortest line of all the restaurants in the University Union.

1

2

3

4

5

6

7

8

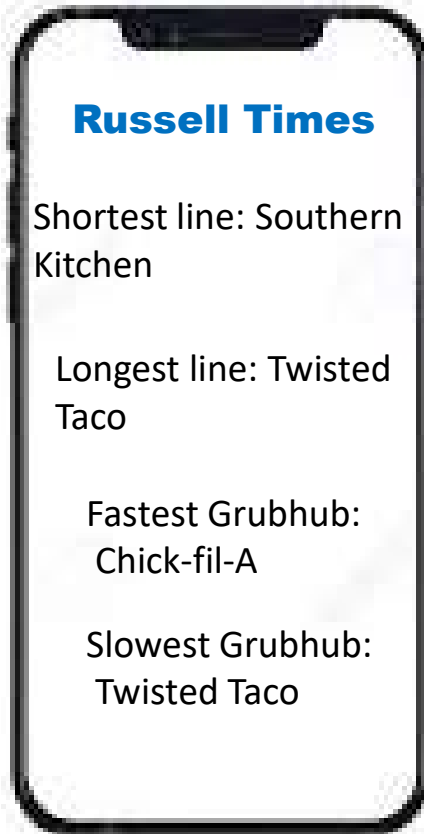

George checks the time and realizes he has work soon and needs to leave his home.

As George is driving to the campus of UofSC his stomach starts to rumble. He realizes he forgot to eat lunch.

George checks the Russell app to see that he can go right to Southern Kitchen and get his lunch quickly

George parks his car and walks to Russell

Southern Kitchen

George arrives at Southern Kitchen and is next in line. He got his food in 3 minutes.

George has time to sit and eat his food

George then walks to his class in a calm manner since he still has time.

George has arrived on time and is no longer hungry.